

Convergent Facilitation

based on the principles of Nonviolent Communication

Have you ever dreaded going to a meeting or watched in dismay as a group collapses into conflict?

If you work with groups that struggle to make decisions or collaborate effectively, this workshop is for you. You'll receive intensive training in Convergent Facilitation, a unique decision-making process developed by Miki Kashtan based on the principles of Nonviolent Communication.

Convergent Facilitation taps into a group's shared purpose and leads to decisions that everyone truly supports – without sacrificing productivity, efficiency, and forward momentum. The method is versatile: use it for fast emergency response, breaking through bottlenecks, or collaboration throughout the life cycle of a long-term project.

It gives you tools to address power differences so everyone at the table can speak frankly about what really matters to them. It even works with highly polarized groups like the longtime political enemies.

What you can take away

- A practical, step-by-step process for discovering breakthrough solutions to problems that seemed unsolvable
- A strategy that helps people transcend conflicts, stretch beyond their initial positions, and embrace a decision that attends to everyone's needs
- Many ways to keep a meeting moving forward without leaving anyone behind.

- Date: 2018.1.22(Mon)~1.25(Thur) 10AM~5PM
- Place: NVC Seolleung Center (Gangnam, 3rd floor, Samsung-Dong 143-7, Nam-Yang Bldg.)
- Cost: KRW 500,000
- Registration: Please send a participant's name and E-mail address nvc@krnvc.org
- About the trainer : Miki Kashtan is a certified NVC trainer and a Lead Collaboration Consultant at the Center for Efficient Collaboration. She has helped hundreds of people work together better in nonprofits, corporations, community groups, and government agencies, among others. Miki's teaching focuses on hands-on practice and examples from participants' real lives, so you're prepared to use the Convergent Facilitation framework as soon as you return to work.

Enquiry: 02)6085-5585, training@krnvc.org

* The workshop will be offered in English with Korean translation.